Join us in actively protecting Mississippi's natural resources.

In 1946 a small group of sportsmen, worried about the future of Mississippi's wildlife, got together to discuss their concerns. They believed that citizens could influence how our lands, wildlife, coasts, and rivers are managed, and they wanted to be a part of the decisions being made.

Now, over 60 years later, the Mississippi Wildlife Federation is the largest network of conservationists in the state. We are a federation of individuals, businesses, and organizations committed to natural resource conservation, environmental quality, hunting, fishing, and other outdoor recreation in Mississippi.

We are a citizen's organization, not a state or federal agency. We serve as the state affiliate of the National Wildlife Federation.
